BREAKS FROM HER MOORINGS

Giant Shenandoah Sails Away Into the Night.

TWENTY-TWO MEN ON BOARD

Officers and Crew Soon at Work and the Great Dirigible Rides Out the Gale—Ship Turns Later Under Control and Starts Back Southward to Her Moorings—Wild Ride in a Furious Gale.

New York, Jan. 17.—Twenty-two men of America's air navy balanced on the ragged edge of eternity for hours during the night as they drifted over the Atlantic seaboard in the Shenandoah, world's greatest airship, which broke from her moorings at Lakehurst in a 70-mile gale.

While millions watched great searchlights play the sky for a sight of the Shenandoah, or listened to messages to and from the crew aboard the renegade dirigible, the "rooky crew" of the Lakehurst polar flight promptly proved themselves equal to the occasion.

While such experienced and hardened air navigators as Commander Frank R. McCrary, in command of the Lakehurst naval air field, and others like him, with hearts in throats, watched the Shenandoah drift away into the fog and the rain, darkness coming on, the 22 men aboard took steps to get the motors running and keep the monster "right with the world."

At 7 o'clock last night there came a smashing gust of wind that surpassed the frantic efforts of the gale that had been blowing the ship sharply about the tall mooring mast for two hours. The mooring cap on the extreme bow of the ship was uprooted by a crash of wind. Within a minute after the ship was wrenched free from her mast, the cool heads on board were spilling the water ballast, which let her rise into the dark and stormy night, and she went sailing away.

Strong men used to hard scenes felt their heart beats stop as loose pieces of debris came thumping down out of the clouds about them. But aboard ship the wireless was soon at work. The mind of Radio Operator James A. Robertson snapped into the game, and over the air came the first message, only an hour or so after the big ship started on her romantic ride: "Everything O. K. Try to advise us about weather conditions."

Then radio fans began to report them from town after town as the wind carried them in a crow flight north.

And when the ship turned, under control, and started back southward—homeward bound—all along the way streaks from searchlights and bulletins by radio told of the struggle against a veering sou'-sou'-easter, with the air monster winning, slow but sure, of four of its six motors purring smoothly.

AGAINST WAGE CUT

Ohio Mine Workers Demand Six-Hour Working Day.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—Ohio coal miners went on record as favoring a six-hour working day, and demanding that no agreement with operators be signed which does not contain this provision. The delegates also directed the national organization to take all legal steps possible to organize the nonunion miners in the United States, and thus eliminate "damaging competition to union mines."

The miners' convention also urged the repeal of the Platt-Elkins law "under which Ohio chiropractors have been prosecuted," and establishing a board of chiropractic examiners, composed of chiropractors, not medical men; passage by the legislature of an old age pension law; active participation by miners in first-aid and mine rescue work, and payment for miners for removing stone during mining for coal.

William Green, international secretary, declared that the United Mine Workers of America will not be led to accept a wage reduction by the promise that it will decrease unemployment in the mining industry. "Reduced wages are not a cure for unemployment. We have accepted no reductions since the war, and we solemnly decree that miners must get a living wage for their work."

Fireman James Biggy saved the lives of four children trapped in the garret of a burning house in Chicago. He carried all four of them through smoke so thick he could scarcely see, and with flames scorching his eyes.

SPEAKERS START OUT

Thrift Week to Be Observed in Every Ohio Community.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—According to John F. Fergus, Columbus, chairman of the Ohio Thrift Week committee, thrift week, Jan. 17 to 23, is to be observed in practically every community in Ohio this year. Activities will center mostly around local financial institutions, especially those catering to home financing, according to Fergus. More than 100 speakers will start out today to cover the state, speaking before various chambers of commerce, civic organizations and luncheon clubs. Among the speakers are Cyrus Locher, head of the department of commerce of Ohio, and J. W. Tannehill, state superintendent of building and loan institutions.

Special recognition is to be given to "Own Your Home Day," Jan. 22. According to building and loan officials, Ohioans will build more homes during 1924 than during 1923, if sufficient funds are available to meet the demand for home loans. Speakers will urge the people to put their money into local financial institutions in order to make 1924 a prosperous year.

WOMEN WIN FIGHT AT COMMITTEE MEET

Get Equal Representation in Democratic Convention.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The women showed their fighting spirit and successfully waged a battle in the concluding session of the Democratic national committee meeting for 50-50 representation in the 1924 national convention.

The national committee adopted an amendment to the report of the resolutions committee fixing representation in the convention which "recommended to the states that half of the delegates-at-large shall be women."

The resolutions committee had sought to evade a direct commitment and compromise the question by providing "that in order that opportunity may be afforded the various states to give adequate representation to women delegates-at-large without disturbing prevailing party custom, there may be elected four delegates-at-large for each senator in congress with one-half vote each."

This did not satisfy the women, who insisted on a declaration for equal representation with the men. They fought their own fight on the floor of the national committee and won by a handsome margin.

The opposition to amending the resolutions committee's responsibility asserting a definite recommendation of equal representation was led by Kremer, ardently supported by Senator Glass and Committeeman W. H. Thompson of Nebraska, and James H. Moyle of Utah. Glass contended that to dictate to the states would be further infringement of state's rights. Thompson argued that to increase the number of delegates-at-large from four to eight would conflict with primary laws in progressive states of the west.

BRYAN FAVORS COMBINATION

Encourages the Democratic-Insurgent Coalition.

PAYS A VISIT TO THE CAPITOL

Commoner Lets It Be Known He Is Not at All Pleased With Selection of New York as Democratic National Convention City—Will Not Attack the Democratic Committee, However.

Washington, Jan. 17.—William Jennings Bryan was at the capitol to encourage the Democratic-Insurgent coalition which has control of the house in the bitter fight over liberalization of the rules.

Bryan urged such a combination at the opening of congress in December, when the insurgents were ready to join the Democrats to overturn the regular Republicans' power in the rules committee, which directs what legislation shall have right of way under ordinary circumstances.

At that time, however, Representative Garrett, the Democratic leader, and many of his chief aids were strongly opposed to a definite alignment with the insurgents. This attitude drew fire from quite a number of members in the ranks, who openly demanded that Bryan's advice be followed. Charges of "reactionism" were hurled at Garrett by some of the Democrats.

Now, such a working arrangement as that used by Bryan has come to pass in the rules fight, whether or not as a result of his action or by formal agreement, and leaders of the two elements in the coalition have let it be known that they will be found sticking together on all measures wherein the question of conservative and progressive legislation is at stake.

Bryan's idea has been all along that the Democrats should combine with the insurgent-progressives on the Republican side to wrest control from the conservatives or "reactionaries" as he termed the Republican regulars. It was pointed out by Bryan adherents that the result of this maneuvering has been that the Republicans, having an apparent majority, are in the position of authority and will be held responsible by the country, but as a matter of fact can exercise no control or direction that does not meet with the approval of one or the other of the factions in the coalition.

Mr. Bryan also took occasion to let his friends in congress know that he was not at all pleased with the selection of New York as the Democratic national convention city. But the commoner let it be known he will not make any attack on the national committee for selecting New York. Bryan was satisfied, according to Representative Upshaw, to warn the party of the fate that awaits it if "Tammany, Wall street and the wet" interests of New York are permitted to name the presidential candidate and write the liquor plank in the platform.

FORM RESEARCH BUREAU

Representatives of All Branches of Business and Industry Meet.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—An organization known as the Ohio research bureau was formed at a meeting here, State Senators Bolton of Cleveland and Burch of Akron called together official representatives of all branches of business and industry to form an organization for the purpose of investigating and collecting facts concerning taxation, state government and all other legislative and economic issues.

This organization will publish its findings and make fact reports to the legislature and the general public on conditions from time to time. It will make no partisan recommendations, however.

Trustees elected were: W. R. Woodford, Cleveland; J. E. Devine, Columbus; C. A. Dyer, Columbus; B. E. Ling, Cleveland; W. R. King, Columbus; T. E. Monk, Cleveland; John E. McCrehen, Columbus; Charles James, Columbus; J. R. Millikin, Cincinnati; C. A. Stillman, Akron, and George Sheridan, Columbus. The trustees will hold their first meeting in Cleveland Jan. 31 to perfect organization.

California Wins.

Los Angeles, Jan. 17.—California won all the glory of the day when MacDonald Smith of San Francisco captured the state open golf championship with a score of 285 for the four rounds of the Los Angeles Country Club, and Eddie Loos of Los Angeles finished in second position, one stroke behind Smith.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Property Reappraisal Urged.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—General reappraisal of all property in Ohio was urged at the fourth annual conference of the Ohio Tax association here. A special session of the legislature to remove the constitutional restrictions against adjustment of the state's taxation system and to compel a more rigid assessment of real estate was advocated by John A. Zangerle, president of the association and Cuyahoga county auditor. This recommendation was received with enthusiasm by the several hundred tax experts present.

Woman Charged With Murder.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Emma Calovitta, who was acquitted as an accessory in the Kober murder case, was charged with first degree murder in the death of Marino Costanza of this city. Costanza, a plumber, died Feb. 23, 1920, after a week's illness. Detective Cavola said he had obtained a confession from another woman that she had hired Mrs. Calovitta to administer poison in the food of Costanza. The motive was to gain $2,000 insurance money, Cavola said.

Electric Lines Would Quit.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—While the state public utilities commission was hearing the application of the Cleveland, Alliance and Mahoning Valley Railway company to abandon service, two other electric roads in that vicinity filed applications with the commission to quit business. They were the Cleveland and Chagrin Falls Railway company and the Cleveland and Eastern Traction company. All three roads claim to be operating at a loss.

Tattooer Paroled.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—James E. Wild, convicted of tattooing his initials on Marie Sanko and sentenced to an indeterminate term in the Mansfield reformatory, was paroled by Common Pleas Judge Cull. Wild had not starting serving his sentence, being out on bail pending action on appeal. Judge Cull's action followed an investigation of the case and a recommendation by a physician.

State Fair Self-Sustaining.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—The Ohio state fair is no longer a burden to the taxpayer, G. R. Lewis, manager, said, in addressing the Ohio Fair Boys' association. Receipts for the 1923 state fair totaled $191,754.53, and expenditures were $197,457.24. Lewis said. These figures show that only $5,702.71 was used of the $195,000 appropriation.

Manslaughter Charged.

Cincinnati, Jan. 17.—Leo Miller, 18, of Dayton, is charged with manslaughter in a warrant sworn to by his uncle, Nathaniel Miller, this city, in connection with the fatal scalding of the latter's son, Arthur, 3, Dec. 16. Report of the death to Coroner D. C. Hendley indicated the child was scalded to death by accident.

Mines Reopening.

New Lexington, O., Jan. 17.—Mines throughout the Hocking valley are reopening, officials in this district reported. Output ending Jan. 12 was 352,178 tons, compared with 58,226 tons for the same week in December. There are about 1,200 fewer idle miners than on Dec. 1, it was reported.

Privilege of wearing knickerbockers on the streets has been granted the women of Reedy, W. Va., it became known when the result of a referendum showed a majority of one in favor of the women.

HARBOR LIGHTS REMOVED?

American Cruiser Tacoma on Rocks Off Vera Cruz.

NEW PROTEST TO GO FORWARD

Warship Had Steamed at Full Speed From Galveston to Register Protest Against Mexican Rebels' Obstruction of American Commerce—Mexican Army Successful on the Vera Cruz Front.

Washington, Jan. 17.—With the American cruiser Tacoma on the rocks off Vera Cruz, it was indicated that a new and more vigorous protest than originally planned will go forward to the De la Huerta rebels in Mexico.

Navy department officials expressed the belief that harbor lights must have been removed from Blanquilla reef, upon which the cruiser grounded. It was against obstruction in navigation that the officials of the ship were to have prepared the way for a protest upon their arrival.

The Tacoma was in the harbor when she went on the reef. She had steamed at full speed from Galveston with orders to establish a radio communication with Washington so that a protest could be made to De la Huerta against obstructing American commerce, which he had declared against Tampico, port for a vast foreign oil industry.

Reports to the Mexican embassy have declared that the federal army has been successful in a battle of consequence on the Vera Cruz front. Rebels under Generals Maycote and Vidarreal were decisively defeated in an engagement at Tepeaca, which is between Tehuacan and Puebla. This action has broken a large element of the rebel army, it was stated. The statement adds: "On the Jalisco front the federals continue to advance on the rebels, who still are falling back and refusing to give battle. There are numerous skirmishes, but a formal battle has not yet taken place. The retreat can not continue much further, however, before the rebels will be forced to disperse or take up a position and fight."

"In the oil regions around Tuxpam federal troops are continuing the campaign to restore normal conditions in the oil fields formerly held by the rebels."

GREET WILSON

Members of Democratic National Committee Call at His Home.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, seated in a great arm chair in the library of his home here, shook the hands of a hundred men and women, members of the Democratic national committee. The scene possessed all the elements of a great human tragedy. To some of those he had known intimately in the past he gave a few words of personal greeting. To the majority he voiced only a feeble word of acknowledgement of the introduction. The committee members and the few others permitted to call were presented by Chairman Cordell Hull and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the committee, who stood at either side of the former president during the short reception.

"I am glad the convention is going to New York," Mr. Wilson told Chairman Hull. Beyond that he offered no comment on the two days' session of the committee or of the coming presidential campaign.

Prices Soaring in France.

Paris, Jan. 17.—The first effect of the drop in French exchange is seen in the announcement of new leather prices, which were boosted to the highest figure ever known here. Crocodile skin is now selling for a dollar a square inch, while fine dressed calf is not quoted. The importers being unwilling to release their stock. According to present prognostications, all items of feminine apparel here will be from 40 to 50 per cent higher than last year.

Rail Accidents in England.

London, Jan. 17.—There was only one railway accident in England involving loss of life during 1923. This was at Eglee in July, when two passengers were killed. Since the beginning of the present century there have been two years, 1901 and 1908, without a single fatality to passengers. In only three years have more than five persons been killed and in 23 years the number of deaths totals only 73.

FALL ASSAILED

Senator Caraway Alleges Betrayal of High Trust.

Washington, Jan. 17.—A sensational attack upon former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall for his part in the Teapot Dome oil lands lease was made in the senate by Senator Caraway of Arkansas.

Senator Caraway accused Mr. Fall of "wilful and deliberate falsehood" in his statements to the senate investigating committee. He made pointed references to the $100,000 which Mr. Fall received about the time the Teapot Dome lease was granted, and dealt also with the statements of Edward B. McLean, Washington newspaper publisher, in connection with the $100,000 loan. The senator continued: "A cabinet officer betrays the high trust imposed in him and for a corrupt consideration sold the very means by which our national existence is to be protected, and he himself is protected. And except for what I may say about it we will never hear any more of the resolution of mine seeking to cancel the leases of the Teapot Dome and the other oil reserves."

At another point in his address, Senator Caraway drew a bitter parallel between the sale to the British army of "the little rocky fortress on the Hudson" by Benedict Arnold and what he characterized as the sale of the naval oil reserves.

To Hold Minimum Wage Hearings.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—Senator Frank Burch of Akron and Representative Sam Lipp of Cincinnati, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the legislative committee for the investigation of minimum wage laws, conferred here on plans of the committee. Letters and questionnaires have been sent out to organizations on both sides of the question; literature is being collected, and public hearings probably will be held in Columbus within the next few months.

LINKS THREE CITIES

Counterfeiting Plot Revealed by the Secret Service.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—A counterfeiting conspiracy linking Kansas City, Chicago and Denver was revealed by secret service operatives here. Ralph Oldham, former Chicago policeman, and Louis Kettler, alleged implicants, have been sent to Denver for trial, federal authorities stated. Two others, Robert White, alias Edwards, and Fred Barringer, were sentenced at Kansas City to serve terms in a federal penitentiary. Edward C. Bronson, alleged ring leader, is under arrest here and, according to officials, admitted circulating $20,000 in spurious $10 bills throughout the southwest.

Shaken by Quake.

Tokio, Japan, Jan. 17.—Sensai, an important market city on the Bay of Sendai, was shaken by another violent earthquake. It is not known whether the shock had serious results. Official announcement was made placing the casualties of Tuesday's tremor in Tokio and Yokohama at 17 dead. Most estimates of the injured were around 200.

OVERWEIGHT AT CERTAIN AGE INVOLVES DANGER

U. S. Health Service Advises 10 to 20 Pounds Below Average

Washington.—Mortality experience indicates that overweight at certain ages involves serious danger, the degree of danger increasing with the excess in weight over the average for height and age. At younger ages, however, a limited amount of overweight appears to be of advantage or associated with more favorable mortality conditions, overweight persons of such ages having a uniformly lower death rate from tuberculosis.

These are among the conclusions drawn from a study of mortality statistics by the United States public health service. The records of insurance companies indicate that after 35 years of age overweight even in relatively small amounts begins to be dangerous, the seriousness increasing with advancing age and amount of overweight. Other conclusions based on these records are:

Among short men—that is, those below 5 feet 7 inches—at the age period forty to forty-four years, an excess of 20 per cent in weight involves an added mortality of 30 per cent above the normal. A 40 per cent excess in weight in such individuals involves an increased mortality of nearly 80 per cent. Among tall men—that is, those over 5 feet 10 inches—the adverse situation is even more marked; for among them, at ages forty to forty-four, a 20 per cent excess in weight carries a 40 per cent increase in mortality, and a 40 per cent excess in weight doubles the mortality.

On the other hand, underweight in general is an advantage, if the percentage is not too great. It is a serious impairment in early adult life, but from the age of forty onward there apparently are no such penalties, and this condition, in fact, becomes a distinct advantage, for these are the persons who have the best mortality rates.

"It would seem that the records of insurance companies indicate that there is an optimum weight—that is, a weight-height ratio in relation to age that is associated with the most favorable mortality experience, and that this optimum weight, or best build, is not the average build," says the service. "It is stated that those who weigh between 10 and 20 per cent

below the average show the optimum condition for longevity at most ages beyond early adult life.

"Discrimination must be made between types of build of overweight persons, it being shown that among overweights having a large chest capacity the conditions of mortality are more favorable than among those of small chest capacity. Overweights who have large trunks are better risks than those having small chests and large abdominal girth."

Many Pieces of Sculpture Unearthed —Traces of Palace.

Excavations in Rome's ancient Main street, Corso Umberto, have brought to light many pieces of ancient Greek and Roman sculpture. Four triumphal arches stood in the Corso in ancient times and many fragments unearthed in the course of the improvements that are being made are believed to be parts of these arches.

In the Via Plebiscito are traces of a great imperial palace and the walls of an ancient temple. At the Piazza Sciarra, a Corinthian column was found and a fragment from the temple of Neptune. In the Via Caravita two ancient columns were unearthed and also fragments of a medieval church.

SMALL TOWN HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

Stout Women Like Long-Lined Gowns

Plaited Sections Have Tendency to Reduce Lady's Size.

For the woman of larger proportions the dress with plaited sections holds a strong appeal, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Everything has been done with this design to give it long lines and a salutary effect upon the figure that is inclined to stoutness. There are the plaited sections interspersed with those that are plain and, since the material is all the same quality and coloring, it offers no distinct lines of divergence to work havoc with figure lines that in themselves are not entirely straight. The frock was made of a heavy weave of silk crepe in dark brown, or rather one of those shades of brown that lie between the dark and the light and are most expressive of the color tendencies of the present season.

The little cape is indicative of the present mode. Women are finding out how useful a garment of this sort can be. They are rejoicing in its possibilities of offering a slight covering for the frock along with its tendency to give to the costume a more formal sort of appearance. This little, short cape has plaited sections over the sides; and the back section, along with portions on either side of the front, is left plain. Then there is a collar made of printed silk showing tones of brown, green and yellow. It is attached in the most informal manner with tied ends on front that give it a becoming appearance and provide a finish that is consistent with the character of the frock. Then, to repeat the printed silk, cuffs have been added to the plaited frock, and they take on the same appearance as the collar by being provided with the ends that knot about the wrists and leave loose plicated ends flying. Then, around the wide crown on the little hat a scarf of the same silk is tied as an interesting way to solve the consistency of the entire costume.

The dress has been plaited in sections, the idea being that a whole plaited frock becomes too hard a thing to manage, but that when it is done in this manner it solves every practical difficulty and produces a frock of fashion just the same.

This sort of dress can be done in all colors of crepe from white, which is one of the enthusiasms of the season, to the dull black, and in every case it can be so helped by the small application of brilliantly printed silk that it is at once lifted out of the somber and uninteresting class.

Trimmings of Posies for New White Hats

New white hats show trimmings of flowers. For the all-white hat that is meeting with such great favor, gardenias are much used.

One sees much of the violet shades among the new offerings in all departments of dress, especially in the millinery shops where even sport hats in the purple hues are prominent. It is a tone that harmonizes nicely with most of the other fashionable colors and its popularity is assured.

Cement Floors.

Cement floors are found much more frequently than formerly. These appear in different colors and tones, and are either plain and smooth or laid off in tile effect. In kitchens the edges are usually curved up so as to abolish cracks and sharp angles in which dust and dirt may accumulate. They are also used in bathrooms, sun parlors, breakfast rooms and even, now and then, in quite formal rooms. They are sanitary, but cold to the feet.

The Modern Shovel.
What has become of the old-fashioned minister who used to preach against laying up money to rust and corrode while in this mundane sphere? The few shovels we get hear no rust and they do not corrode, neither doth moths prey upon them, but we sometimes feel like it goes the other way, although they have not broken in upon us.—Hartford Republican.

Beat the Burglar to It.
Much sympathy is felt for the burglars who broke into a house at Herne Hill last week. Unfortunately for them the grocer's bill had been paid the previous day.—Punch, London.

AMUSEMENTS
A brilliant cast including Renee Adoree, Barbara La Marr, Earle Williams, Pat O'Malley, Wallace Berry, Josef Swickard and Pat Harmon, figures brilliantly thru Metro's "The Eternal Struggle," the feature attraction at the Met theater.

"The Eternal Struggle" is literally packed with spectacular thrills, most of which were filmed in far Canada where the story is centered. Aside from the tense drama of "The Eternal Struggle," the production has the marvelous beauty of the frozen north as a natural setting and it is beautifully photographed.
"The Eternal Struggle is a notable achievement and ranks easily among the great pictures of the screen. It was adapted by J. G. Hawks and Monte M. Katterjohn from the famous novel by G. B. Lancaster, "The Law-Bringers," and was photographed by Percy Hilburn. It is a Reginald Barker production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS.
In making out his income tax return for the year, 1923, the business man, professional man and farmer will be required to use Form 1040, regardless of whether his net income was or was not in excess of $5000. The smaller form, 1040A, is used for reporting net income of $5,000 or less derived chiefly from salary or wages.
All items of gross income must be reported. In the case of a storekeeper gross income usually consists of the gross profits on sales, together with income from other sources. The return must show the gross sales, purchases and cost of goods sold.
The professional man, lawyer, doctor, dentist, must include all fees and other compensation for professional services. The farmer must report as gross income the proceeds of sale or exchange of products from the sale of products purchased by him and resold. He must also report gross income from all other sources.
Taxpayers, in order to take full advantage of the deductions to which they are entitled, are advised to study carefully the instructions on the forms under the head, "Income from business or profession."

MASTER'S JEWEL
Presented by Heber Lodge Officers to Past Master C. E. Hill.
Heber lodge of Masons of Williamsport, Ohio, met in regular communication Tuesday evening, January 15, under their new corps of officers, Carl Hurst, worshipful master, presiding.
Wellington D. Pontious of Dayton, who was made a Master Mason in Heber lodge in 1895 and still a member paid his home lodge a visit for the first time since 1900 at which time he removed to Dayton and has since made that city his home.
Another event of the evening was the presenting a Past Master's badge or emblem to retiring Master C. E. Hill by Charles H. Carman, who made the presentation in a few and appropriate words as the gift came from the excellent corps of officers who had assisted Mr. Hill as worshipful master during the past two years.
Mr. Hill was very much surprised and in his acceptance tendered his most sincere thanks to the donors of the gift, stating that he was willing and ready at any time to assist in the welfare and prosperity of the lodge and that he also very highly prized the gift and especially the high esteem love and respect that accompanied the same.

Hotel Stenographer
BY ROE FULKERSON
"I never could see why they set him as a model wise guy," said the Hotel Stenographer.
"Who?" asked the House Detective.
"Socrates," answered the girl.
"What's ziz first name?" asked the House Detective.
"They didn't have any when he lived," explained the girl.
"All the people of his time lived in one little spot in the world and each one had his own name, like the pups in a kennel club book. He was just Socrates."
"That was before the days when every street was always dug up by the electric light company putting a conduit on one side and the gas company taking up a pipe on the other. This old guy put in all his time, running around the streets at night with a lantern, hunting an honest man. I bet lots and lots of times some holdup man stuck a gun in his face and took the lantern away from him."
"He used to talk about his wife in a perfectly human way, but this bug to find an honest man drove him to the seclusion of the bathtub where he sat and meditated till he was all wrinkled up, like a washwoman's hands. At last they made him drink a cup of hemlock and put him out of misery."
"For hundreds of years people have been holding a lodge of sorrow over this guy, because he had to drink poison, yet the streets and alleys and hotel corridors are full of simps hunting a bootlegger and when they get it and drink it and knock on the pearly gates and say, 'Peter,' here is another fool," they don't get one bit of sympathy.
"It's a queer world, Kelly."

Indictment Upheld.
New York, Jan. 17.—Indictment against Thomas Seltzer, New York publisher, charging him with possession of an indecent book, was upheld by Supreme Court Justice Wagner when he overruled a demurrer filed by counsel for Seltzer. The court held that question as to character of the book "Casanova's Homecoming," was for the jury to decide. Seltzer denied that the book was indecent within the meaning of the New York statute.

Five Charged With Robbery.
Chicago, Jan. 17.—Five men were arrested here in connection with the $1,500,000 Union station mail robbery here three years ago. Those arrested were: Isadore Goldberg and Louis Kreitzer, brothers-in-law and jewelry brokers; George Rizzio, C. A. Jerdee and M. J. Roell. All are from Chicago. Other arrests will follow, postal inspectors intimated.

THE OLD CAPTAIN

I set all day an' watch the sea—
It wuz my friend fer long, but now
It's flung me off, as friends 'll do;
"You be too old," says it t' me,
"I must hev men whose blood is noo."

I set here in the same high sun
That beats upon the quarterdeck
Of vessels I hev sent like men
Int' the jaws o' hurricanes, an' won—
Showed the young sea a jolly trick
again!

The sailors goin' up th' street
Call out t' me t' take a trip along
O' them—but could I stan' b'side th'
rall?

An' hear another feller's voice 's
sweet
'S vinegar a-bawlin' orders on the gale?

I shan't take dyin' well—I feel it
In my bones—an' yet I'd give the rest
O' these here years t' stan' fer once
upon a bridge

An' tell 'em what t' do; t' feel her Hoppla' faster in the wind that's got 'n
edge!

Yet here I set all day b'fore this shop
O' "curios," they call 'em, people do,
Though they ain't nothin' curious t' me.
The folks that pass us by they call
me "Pop!"

I'm like them other relics, I s'pose,
Picked up off the sea.

Times.

Priests Not Always Celibates.

From the very beginning of the Catholic church it was the custom for those entering the priesthood to renounce marriage. It was not obligatory, and the rule requiring men, who were already married at the time of ordination, to separate from their wives, was not made until the end of the fourth century, when Pope Siricius forbade the clergy to marry, and ordered the separation from their wives of priests already married. This accounts for the fact that St. Peter, the first head of the Catholic church, was a married man.

ARTIST SCOLDS HIS PATRON

Well-Known American Painter Refused to Alter Portrait and Ordered Customer From Studio.

Augustus Johns, the foremost and most original painter in England, came a few weeks ago to the United States to serve on a jury for the Pittsburgh exhibit. In New York his first visit was to the studio of Joseph Stella. He expressed his admiration in no uncertain terms.

A few days later Johns was banqued by some of the foremost captains of finance in America. The painter was asked his opinion about art in general and artists in particular. Whom did he consider the most significant artist in America? He answered that he considered the most original, powerful and exquisite artist in America to be Joseph Stella.

A week later, one by one, most of these financial giants visited the studio of Stella, escorted by their wives. Stella drew their portraits in gold-point. One of them, quite satisfied with the sketch of his wife, made out a check to the artist in four figures. Then Stella asked: "May I ask you what your business is?" The magnate smiled at the innocence of the artist, who evidently was not familiar with big financial personalities, but he answered: "My business is everybody's business," and laughed at his own cryptic joke.

Johns chided Stella for his attitude towards his patrons, but it appears they liked it. "The one whose business you inquired," said Johns, "sells oil in every state of the Union, and also all over the world; the other coal; the third is one of the most prominent bankers in America, and so on."

Stella is not keen about great names; only artistic personalities. A wealthy man once ordered him to change his portrait; or, better said, to correct it. Stella replied: "I don't tell you how to run your business. How dare you presume to advise me about mine?" He refused to make the correction and forbade the man his studio.

Which reminds me of the anecdote of Julius II, who visited Michelangelo while the latter was busy with his frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and ordered the painter to make some changes. Michelangelo lost his temper and said to the pope: "Do I ever tell you how to write your papal bulls?" and forthwith ordered him out of the Sistine Chapel, besides threatening to stop working if he ever entered the chapel again until he had finished the frescoes. Julius II, wise man that he was, realized that he had overstepped his authority and obeyed the injunction of the artist. After all he was only a pope, and Michelangelo was—Michelangelo.—Carlo de Fornaro in Arts and Decorations.

Tennysonian French.

A good Tennyson yarn turns on the poet's ignorance of French and his brother Frederick's uneasy command of it. The brothers Tennyson were enjoying together a holiday in Paris. Coming down before Alfred one morning, Frederick, who simply wished the fire to be kept, said to a waiter, "Prenez garde de ne pas laisser sortir le feu" ("Take care not to let the fire go out"), but with his English accent he became fou (fool), so that when the great Alfred sauntered downstairs later the waiters did their best to follow the quaintly worded order. The eccentric appearance and manners of the poet had predisposed the establishment to regard him as a lunatic and here was crowning proof in the order of his keeper. Alfred stormed and raged, but was restrained by force till his brother's return.—From the Argonaut.

Robin Hood a Disgraced Earl.

Robin Hood was a noted English freebooter and outlaw who, according to tradition, dwelt with his followers in Sherwood forest, Nottinghamshire, during the reign of Richard I (1189-1199), and later. Many of the old ballads and stories commemorate his deeds of valor, his generosity, his gallantry, and his skill in archery. His principal companions were Little John, Friar Tuck, Will Scarlet and Maid Marian; while his chief enemies were the abbot of St. Mary's and the sheriff of Nottingham. According to some historians, Robin Hood was a name assumed by the earl of Huntingdon, who was disgraced and banished from court by Richard I at the time of his accession.

Clorine, the colored cook, approached the cashier's desk with an air of determination on her features. "I wants yo' to take care of this heah cash fo' a while," she remarked, plunking down her savings of several years.

"Why, Clorine?" asked the cashier, who knew her of old. I thought you always said you'd never trust the bank?"

"Dat's all right, dat's all right, but de circumfrances surroundin' de matter makes me change mah mind, you see. I se gwine get married, an' Ah don't want dat much money round de house with a strange cullud man on de premises."—From the Savannah News.

Avoid Watermelon Loss in Transit

Stem-End Rot Fungus That Brings About Decay Still Is Important Factor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Watermelon growers should give serious consideration to their responsibilities in connection with prevention of losses in transit, advises the United States Department of Agriculture. Examination of carloads at destination has shown that, provided shipments are properly loaded in clean, well-ventilated cars, and delivered within a reasonable length of time, any losses experienced usually result from the shipping of:

- (1) Melons affected with bad anthracnose pock marks.
- (2) Severely sunscalded or stale fruit.
- (3) Melons that carry cuts and bruises as a result of careless handling, or
- (4) Melons, the stems of which have not been recipped and treated for prevention of stem-end rot.

Rot Coming Under Control.

The stem-end rot fungus, which not only causes stem-end rot, but also brings about decay following bruises and cuts in the rind, has been a source of heavy loss in the past, and is still a factor of great importance. In 1919 a campaign of education concerning methods of control for this disease was initiated in the Southeastern states, the United States Department of Agriculture and the state extension services co-operating. As a result of the interest taken in this work by farmers, distributors, and railroads, stem-end rot is coming under control. This conclusion is borne out by records from the food products inspection service, which indicate that in Georgia shipments losses from stem-end rot have been cut from 14.4 per cent in 1920 to 8.3 per cent in 1921, and 6.2 per cent in 1922; and in Florida shipments from 16.6 per cent in 1920 to 10.1 per cent in 1921 and 5.3 per cent in 1922.

Timely Suggestions.

In order that stem-end rot and losses in transit due to other causes may be reduced, farmers should make every effort to carry out the following suggestions at harvest season:

- (1) If possible avoid working while the vines are wet.
- (2) Never permit labor to handle rotten melons in the field and then work with fruit for shipment.
- (3) Never permit clipper to handle or to touch knife to rotten melons in the field.
- (4) Never permit clipper to cut into melons while pushing knife through the stem.
- (5) Never permit clipper to stand melons on end to mark them in the field.
- (6) Insist on careful handling by the tote boys and wagon men.
- (7) Pad wagons thoroughly in order to avoid nail or splinter punctures, cuts, and bruises.
- (8) Load on the day melons are clipped, in clean, dry car, the walls of which have been papered. Use dry straw for bedding. If possible, pad ends of car, although not in such a way as to obstruct ventilators. These should be fastened open.
- (9) Handle carefully when unloading melons from wagons and packing. Do not allow labor to stand or sit on melons.
- (10) Reject melons that do not have a firm, green stem, or that show sunscald or bad anthracnose marking.
- (11) Apply stem treatment as described in Farmers' Bulletin 1277, recipping stems to firm green surface before applying the disinfectant paste.

Clear Moss From Fruit Trees by Proper Spray

Moss can be quite readily cleared from the trees. The solution of strong bordeaux is one of the best sprays. The old formula of lime, sulphur and salt, where the same weight of salt is used in the spray as of lime and sulphur, namely 15 pounds to 50 gallons of the concentrated spray, is also very efficient in removing moss. But a substance which is very good to use is common lye. The lye can be used straight by dissolving in plain water, or it can be used in the lime sulphur spray. The rate to use is about one pound can of lye for every six or seven gallons of spray. It cleans off the moss quite readily, seems to soften the bark and gives it a clean, bright appearance.

Birds Are Not Numerous Because of Insect Pests

The chief reason birds are not more numerous and that insect pests consequently increase so rapidly is that suitable places are not provided for nesting with protection from vermin. Cleaning out fence rows and corners beautifies the premises but ruins the birds' homes. Building bird houses and putting them on poles will help to replace the natural homes. But better than this is to leave some small thickets at different spots over the farm.

Improper Feeding Cause of Droopiness in Chicks

Droopy, dull chicks, with long wings and short bodies are the result of feeding too soon, overfeeding and allowing feed on the floor or ground to become spoiled, overheating, chilling, damp floors, and from the effects of lice and mites. If chicks are droopy, correct the cause.

Auto Thief's Dog Betrays Him to Cops

Detroit, Mich.—Police recovered an automobile reported to have been stolen. In the back was an alreale dog. Later in the night other police found a fifteen-year-old youth asleep in another automobile. They took him to the police station and the alreale dog gave unmistakable evidence of being his property. The youth confessed he had taken the automobile.

Careless Mother.

Margaret used to accompany her mother whenever she went shopping. One day her mother, being absorbed in her purchasing, failed to notice Margaret wasn't beside her. When she became aware of the child's absence, every one near joined in the search. Finally the mother, in desperation, went to the father's store. Margaret had just found her way into the store and said, "O, daddy, I think mother is lost. I can't find her."

MONROE TOWNSHIP

The Farm bureau just closed one of the best institutes ever held here. Good speakers and good attendance. Even James Tootle has learned how to feed cattle.

Rev. Vaghn gave a splendid talk to our school Monday morning at chapel. The pastor, Frank McCafferty and Guy Benton Ellis sang two numbers for the high school.

The display work from the school seemed to be appreciated by the patrons. The course of study offered by our high school is one of the broadest in our county. The state department approved the course at once.

Bess R. Telford, our music and art teacher, has accepted a position near her home in Kentucky at a much larger salary. The music teacher of Saltcreek township is also leaving. Special teachers are much in demand at this time.

The Salle Bell Ringers quartet will be with us March 24.

Some of the commercial subjects will be offered in our high school this next semester.

John Stevenson and Glenn Foster made splendid talks upon cattle feeding that was much appreciated by our people.

The societies of the high school elected their officers for the last semester. Alethian society elected for president, Grace Busic; secretary, Iva Crawford. Philisophian club elected for president, Earl McCafferty and secretary, Edwin Arbogast.

Floyd Zimmerman, of Columbus, visited his parents over Saturday and Sunday.

Wayne Sorenson, a former graduate of Monroe high, visited our schools Monday.

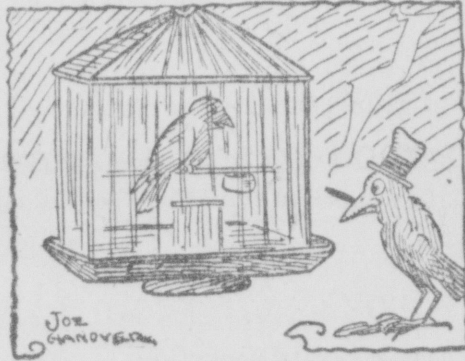

Miss Etta Thompson of Columbus, was the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Alkire.

Maxwell Winfough, who is working at Portsmouth, visited his parents Sunday.

Revival services are now being held at the Yanketown Methodist Episcopal church with Rev. George Clay in charge.

HARTMAN THEATER

The movement of one of the largest theatrical troupes from New York has been undertaken by the Shuberts, who will present the latest version of "The Passing Show" the new 1923 edition, at the Hartman theater, Columbus, the week commencing Monday, January 14. It moved out of the Winter Garden in its entirety and included without a doubt, the heaviest production material ever transported with any theatrical organization. Since the organization of "The Passing Show" eleven years ago, Columbus has seen the various revues emanating from the famous Winter Garden. Famed for its spectacular features and noted for its excellent combination of artists, the Winter Garden company has this year excelled all previous records. The costuming, scenic effects and elaborate mechanical devices which contribute to this stupendous musical revel, mark the highest attainment in the Winter Garden history. There are over 100 girls grouped in 24 musical diversions all of them arrayed in the very latest Winter Garden fashions. The Winter Garden has never been noted for its display of street costumes, but it has become nationally known for its display of state costumes. It has been said that there is more originality in the new Winter Garden designs than has ever before been seen. Two features which caused nothing short a sensation during the run of "The Passing Show" in New York are the mechanical combinations which go to make up the "Living Curtain" and the "Living Chandelier." In addition to these novelties the production takes in, in all, 28 scenes. The splendid company which has carried "The Passing Show" thru its several months in New York, includes Ted Lewis, popularly referred to as the "High Hatted Tragedian of Song" with his Musical Clowns George Hassell, George Jessel, Frank Gaby, Louise Dose, Vera Ross, Perry Askam, Hattie Darling and many others. Melodious music has been provided by Sigmund Romberg and Jean Schwartz, both noted for their former contributions. Mail orders now. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

A PRISONER

The One Outside—He don't look like a crook. I wonder what he's in for?

The Last Whitewash.

The well-known Styvesant Fish of New York was talking about a certain "whitewash" report.

"That report," he said, "reminds me of a little boy who was taken by his mother to visit a cemetery."

"The little boy went from plot to plot, from tomb to tomb, reading the inscriptions with awe and delight. Then, when he had read them all, he said:

"Now take me to the other cemetery, ma."

"The other cemetery?" said his mother. "What other cemetery do you mean, dear?"

"The one," said the little boy, "where the bad people are buried."

Pledge of Friendship.

The custom of handshaking dates to the time of Henry the Second.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 20

MOSES CALLED TO DELIVER ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 3:1-12. GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.—Heb. 11:24, 25.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Moses, the Liberator. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Moses and the Deliverance From Egyptian Bondage.

After Joseph was dead, there was a change of dynasty (Exod. 1:8). The new king, noting the rapid increase of the Israelites, counseled the exercise of prudence lest when war broke out they join the enemy and fight against the Egyptians. One of the methods to curtail this increase was to enslave the people. Failing in that, an edict was issued that every male child should be drowned. While the oppression of God's people was heading up, God was providing a deliverer. Moses, that deliverer, was first trained at his mother's knee, then at Pharaoh's court, and finally under God's immediate hand in the desert.

I. The Lord Spoke to Moses From the Burning Bush (Exod. 3:1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God, ensnared in the very fire of God, or God dwelling in the midst of an elect people. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him he was the God of his fathers, the Covenant God. As soon as he knew it was God speaking to him, he hid his face.

II. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (Exod. 3:7-10).

1. God's Active Interest in His People (v. 7). In the preamble of this commission, God said to Moses, (1) "I have seen the affliction of my people"; (2) "I have heard their cry"; (3) "I know their sorrow."

2. God's Gracious Obligation to His People (vv. 8, 9). (1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians. (2) To bring them up out of the land. (3) To bring them into a "good land and a large."

3. God's Commission to Moses (v. 10). "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses. At any rate, he realized his unfitness to undertake such a task.

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (Exod. 3:11; 4:10).

1. Personal Unfitness (v. 11). He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but pled his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him. The token of His presence would be His worship with the people of Israel on this mountain.

2. The Difficulty of the People to Understand Moses' Relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer 40 years before. Since God reveals Himself under a new name as He assumes a new relationship to His people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be, and His corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty revealing to him a name different in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is, "I Am." This name is from the Hebrew word, "to be." It indicates (1) God's self-existence—the One whose very nature it is to be—the cause of all being. (2) His self-sufficiency. He said, "I Am That I Am." Since God is the unique One, He could not go outside of Himself to explain Himself; (3) His unchangeableness. What He always was and is, He evermore shall be.

3. Unbelief on the Part of the People (Exod. 4:1). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (Exod. 4:2).

4. Lack of Eloquence (Exod. 4:10). This difficulty the Lord met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron. Moses was to be in the place of God to Pharaoh and Aaron was to be his prophet (Exod. 7:1, 2).

Lasting Friendship.

Perfect Peace.

The peace which the Savior gives His own is peace of heart and mind amid daily duties. It is that "central peace" which may subsist in the heart of endless agitation.—Boyd.

Be Courageous.

A Love Story in Japan.

What would the American reader think, having been brought by the author to that place where the hero's voice becomes soft and the heroine blushes and lowers her eyes, to see a row of asterisks indicating a footnote, which says: "At this point he asked her to marry him." That is what the Japanese have done in the love scene in "John Halifax, Gentleman," so that it might accord with their peculiar sense of delicacy.—World Outlook.

One Millionth of an Inch.

Steel gauges accurate to the incredible fineness of a millionth part of an inch are now being made in quantities at the United States bureau of standards. So extraordinarily precise is the method of manufacture, simple as it is, that in one instance 31 finished gauges out of a lot of 53 were absolutely accurate to .000,001 inches, and the balance all within .000,002 inches of precision, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The gauges are steel disks.

SOLDIER'S NERVES ON EDGE

Veterans Will Understand and Excuse Private O'Grady's Unnecessary Rousing of the Camp.

Veterans of the great war who served in the old front-line trenches in France will be able to sympathize with Private O'Grady. Some of them can remember seeing the posts that held the barbed wire out in front come together on a moonlight night and advance in a stealthy and threatening manner. They know how they felt as evening came and they prepared to "stand to." They can understand how O'Grady felt when after a day of hard fighting under a blistering Philippine sun he was assigned to do sentry duty.

The battalion camp was not more than a quarter of a mile from a curving beach, and O'Grady's post was at the water's edge. As darkness fell and the stars came out he felt weak and depressed. He glanced at the line of a fire-crested wave and watched it charge toward the shore. He glanced at a flat rock lying some dozen paces away. What! Did the rock move? It certainly did!

He looked in the opposite direction. Another flame-tipped wave was rolling toward a number of rocks lying a short distance from the water. Those rocks moved too! Very slowly they started to meet the incoming wave. He shouted "Halt!" and brought his gun to bear.

The rocks halted, and O'Grady rubbed his eyes. What had happened to him? He glanced back over his shoulder toward camp. A rock directly behind him was coming toward him. Ah! Sneaking up to hold him in the back! O'Grady rushed madly at it and dashed the butt of his gun against its hard surface. Then he mopped his forehead. Just a common rock on the sand!

He looked up and down the shore. There they were again! Rocks everywhere, creeping, crawling by ones, by twos, by threes and in large groups! Then the sentinel's nerves gave way. The whole battalion was awakened by his yelling like a Comanche as his rifle spat fire in the darkness.

When it was safe to approach him it took half an hour to calm him and to prove to him that his treacherous, travelling rocks were only immense but innocent turtles making their nightly visit to the water in search of food.—Youth's Companion.

Justifying Shakespeare's Will.

Little as is generally known about the life of Shakespeare, there are certain legends that everyone has heard. Now Joseph Quincy Adams in his "Life of William Shakespeare" has explained away a large portion of these legends. He didn't believe that Shakespeare was chased out of Stratford for deer poaching, or that he held horses in the rain before the doors of London theaters, or that he had any difficulties with the "dark lady," or that he had anything but the most solicitous affection for his wife when he willed her the second-best bed. The best bed, Professor Adams tells us, was usually an ornate and unused affair, reserved for guests, and Mrs. Shakespeare, being at the time, an invalid, past sixty, would have been more comfortable in the bed she was used to. Also, it is not to be assumed that the bed was all she got from the Shakespeare estate; the law explicitly providing a handsome dowry right, it would not have occurred to Shakespeare to specify the amount in money and chattels she was to receive in the will.

Ancient Customs in England.

Dr. George C. Williamson in his book, "Curious Survivals," says that old customs die hard, and in about every part of England one may find ceremonies which, linked to the days of long ago, have been handed down from generation to generation. One of the most ancient of these survivals is the court of hustings at the Guildhall, London, which dates back to Anglo-Saxon and Scandinavian times, and which is the oldest court that still sits in England.

The dais on the occasion of the sittings of the court is sprinkled with aromatic herbs, a ceremony which recalls the time when this was done to prevent infection from prisoners suffering from jail fever.

This custom is similar to the one observed by masters and wardens of the various city companies who, in official processions, carry sweet-smelling bouquets. This was done originally to ward off the smells from the streets!

Regains Her Citizenship.

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, author of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," is once more an American citizen. She was recently naturalized in the Superior court, having applied under the act of congress permitting American-born women who had married foreign subjects to regain citizenship. She married a British subject in Rome, twenty-five years ago.

Ancient Tavern to Be Preserved.

The famous old Arrow Rock tavern, on the Missouri river, in Missouri, has been purchased by the state and turned over to the Daughters of the American Revolution. The old tavern was a place of rest and refreshment for the southwestern trader and plainsman. For some time it has been a depository for articles of historic interest. One of these articles is Daniel Boone's fiddle.

RALPH CONNER'S

New Book, "The Gaspards of Pine Croft," Most Interesting.

Ralph Conner's stories, so redolent of the hills are beautiful always. The descriptions make word pictures in the mind and can not be forgotten. Lessons are taught. His new book, "The Gaspards of Pine Croft" is no exception. As in no other story, the importance of a mother's training and influence on her child, is told with fetching and convicting power. As in no other story, the fact is shown that the influence of a weak and wicked father, can be offset by a godly praying mother. As in no other story, does the main character, sacrifice, continually for what he believes to be right.

Far fetched tho the sacrifice of Paul may be, he is a beautiful character who eventually gets his reward for righteous doing. And yet, these lessons are woven into the tale so adroitly that it does not preach; at least only by atmosphere. Thrilling, so interesting that one does not wish to lay it down until he reads the last word, so is Ralph Conner's new story. He preaches daily to thousands and hundreds of thousands thru his pen. What preacher has done so much? What one can do more?

LEGION AUXILIARY.

Monday evening at the meeting of the American Legion auxiliary of the local post, officers for the ensuing year were installed and candidates initiated. A vote of thanks was given Charles Smith for his assistance in making the auxiliary sale held at his place of business a success. C. C. Chappelle was also given a vote of thanks for publicity given the sale thru the medium of the Union-Herald. After the business session an old-fashioned oyster supper was served.

The hope of the local post is to enlist every woman eligible to membership.

ON DOLLINGS JURY.

Two of the jurors selected to serve on the federal jury now trying William G. Benham, former president and Dwight L. Harrison, former vice president of the defunct R. L. Dollings company on charges of using the mails to defraud are from this county. They are Marvin Dresbach of Pickaway township and Eber A. Riggins of New Holland. Felix Swope of Lancaster, another juror, is well known in this city.

Grease Spots.

When grease is spilled on a hardwood floor it can be hardened and scraped off if cold water is poured on. If it is not detected immediately, cover the grease spot with starch or powdered chalk, which will absorb most of the grease. It can then be washed off with hot soapsuds.

Giant Shenandoah Sails Away Into the Night.

TWENTY-TWO MEN ON BOARD

Officers and Crew Soon at Work and the Great Dirigible Rides Out the Gate—Ship Turns Later Under Control and Starts Back Southward to Her Moorings—Wild Ride in a Furious Gale.

New York, Jan. 17.—Twenty-two men of America's air navy balanced on the ragged edge of eternity for hours during the night as they drifted over the Atlantic seaboard in the Shenandoah, world's greatest airship, which broke from her moorings at Lakehurst in a 70-mile gale.

While millions watched great searchlights play the sky for a sight of the Shenandoah, or listened to messages to and from the crew aboard the renegade dirigible, the "rooky crew" of the Lakehurst polar flight promptly proved themselves equal to the occasion.

While such experienced and hardened air navigators as Commander Frank R. McCrary, in command of the Lakehurst naval air field, and others like him, with hearts in throats, watched the Shenandoah drift away into the fog and the rain, darkness coming on, the 22 men aboard took steps to get the motors running and keep the monster "right with the wind."

At 7 o'clock last night there came a smashing gust of wind that surpassed the frantic efforts of the gale that had been blowing the ship sharply about the tall mooring mast for two hours. The mooring cap on the extreme bow of the ship was uprooted by a crash of wind. Within a minute after the ship was wrenched free from her mast, the cool heads on board were spilling the water ballast, which let her rise into the dark and stormy night, and she went sailing away.

Strong men used to hard scenes felt their heart beats stop as loose pieces of debris came thumping down out of the clouds about them. But aboard ship the wireless was soon at work. The mind of Radio Operator James A. Robertson snapped into the game, and over the air came the first message, only an hour or so after the big ship started on her romantic ride: "Everything O. K. Try to advise us about weather conditions."

Then radio fans began to report them from town after town as the wind carried them in a crow flight north.

And when the ship turned, under control, and started back southward—homeward bound—all along the way streaks from searchlights and bulletins by radio told of the struggle against a veering sou'-easter, with the air monster winning, slow but sure, with four of its six motors purring smoothly.

AGAINST WAGE CUT

Ohio Mine Workers Demand Six-Hour Working Day.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—Ohio coal miners went on record as favoring a six-hour working day, and demanding that no agreement with operators be signed which does not contain this provision. The delegates also directed the national organization to take all legal steps possible to organize the nonunion miners in the United States, and thus eliminate "damaging competition to union miners."

The miners' convention also urged the repeal of the Platt-Elms law "under which Ohio chiropractors have been prosecuted," and establishing a board of chiropractic examiners, composed of chiropractors, not medical men; passage by the legislature of an old age pension law; active participation by miners in first-aid and mine rescue work, and payment for miners for removing stone during mining for coal.

William Green, international secretary, declared that the United Mine Workers of America will not be led to accept a wage reduction by the promise that it will decrease unemployment in the mining industry. "Reduced wages are not a cure for unemployment. We have accepted no reductions since the war, and we solemnly decree that miners must get a living wage for their work."

Fireman James Biggy saved the lives of four children trapped in the garret of a burning house in Chicago. He carried all four of them through smoke so thick he could scarcely see, and with flames scorching his eyes.

SPEAKERS START OUT

Thrift Week to Be Observed in Every Ohio Community.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—According to John F. Fergus, Columbus, chairman of the Ohio Thrift Week committee, thrift week, Jan. 17 to 23, is to be observed in practically every community in Ohio this year. Activities will center mostly around local financial institutions, especially those catering to home financing, according to Fergus. More than 100 speakers will start out today to cover the state, speaking before various chambers of commerce, civic organizations and luncheon clubs. Among the speakers are Cyrus Locher, head of the department of commerce of Ohio, and J. W. Tannehill, state superintendent of building and loan institutions.

Special recognition is to be given to "Own Your Home Day," Jan. 22. According to building and loan officials, Ohioans will build more homes during 1924 than during 1923, if sufficient funds are available to meet the demand for home loans. Speakers will urge the people to put their money into local financial institutions in order to make 1924 a prosperous year.

WOMEN WIN FIGHT AT COMMITTEE MEET

Get Equal Representation in Democratic Convention.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The women showed their fighting spirit and successfully waged a battle in the concluding session of the Democratic national committee meeting for 50-50 representation in the 1924 national convention.

The national committee adopted an amendment to the report of the resolutions committee fixing representation in the convention which "recommended to the states that half of the delegates-at-large shall be women."

The resolutions committee had sought to evade a direct commitment and compromise the question by providing "that in order that opportunity may be afforded the various states to give adequate representation to women delegates-at-large without disturbing prevailing party custom, there may be elected four delegates-at-large for each senator in congress with one-half vote each."

This did not satisfy the women, who insisted on a declaration for equal representation with the men. They fought their own fight on the floor of the national committee and won by a handsome margin.

The opposition to amending the resolutions committee's responsibility, asserting a definite recommendation of equal representation was led by Kremer, ardently supported by Senator Glass and Committeeman W. H. Thompson of Nebraska, and James H. Moyle of Utah. Glass contended that to dictate to the states would be further infringement of state's rights. Thompson argued that to increase the number of delegates-at-large from four to eight would conflict with primary laws in progressive states of the west.

BRYAN FAVORS COMBINATION

Encourages the Democratic-Insurgent Coalition.

PAYS A VISIT TO THE CAPITOL

Commoner Lets It Be Known He Is Not at All Pleased With Selection of New York as Democratic National Convention City—Will Not Attack the Democratic Committee, However.

Washington, Jan. 17.—William Jennings Bryan was at the capitol to encourage the Democratic-insurgent coalition which has control of the house in the bitter fight over liberalization of the rules.

Bryan urged such a combination at the opening of congress in December, when the insurgents were ready to join the Democrats to overturn the regular Republicans' power in the rules committee, which directs what legislation shall have right of way under ordinary circumstances.

At that time, however, Representative Garrett, the Democratic leader, and many of his chief aids were strongly opposed to a definite alignment with the insurgents. This attitude drew fire from quite a number of members in the ranks, who openly demanded that Bryan's advice be followed. Charges of "reactionism" were hurled at Garrett by some of the Democrats.

Now, such a working arrangement as that used by Bryan has come to pass in the rules fight, whether or not as a result of his action or by formal agreement, and leaders of the two elements in the coalition have let it be known that they will be found sticking together on all measures wherein the question of conservative and progressive legislation is at stake.

Bryan's idea has been all along that the Democrats should combine with the insurgent-progressives on the Republican side to wrest control from the conservatives or "reactionaries" as he termed the Republican regulars. It was pointed out by Bryan adherents that the result of this maneuvering has been that the Republicans, having an apparent majority, are in the position of authority and will be held responsible by the country, but as a matter of fact can exercise no control or direction that does not meet with the approval of one or the other of the factions in the coalition.

Mr. Bryan also took occasion to let his friends in congress know that he was not at all pleased with the selection of New York as the Democratic national convention city. But the commoner let it be known he will not make any attack on the national committee for selecting New York. Bryan was satisfied, according to Representative Upshaw, to warn the party of the fate that awaits it if "Tammany, Wall street and the wet" interests of New York are permitted to name the presidential candidate and write the liquor plank in the platform.

FORM RESEARCH BUREAU

Representatives of All Branches of Business and Industry Meet.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—An organization known as the Ohio research bureau was formed at a meeting here. State Senators Bolton of Cleveland and Burch of Akron, called together official representatives of all branches of business and industry to form an organization for the purpose of investigating and collecting facts concerning taxation, state government and all other legislative and economic issues.

This organization will publish its findings and make fact reports to the legislature and the general public on conditions from time to time. It will make no partisan recommendations, however.

Trustees elected were: W. R. Woodford, Cleveland; J. E. Devine, Columbus; C. A. Dyer, Columbus; B. E. Ling, Cleveland; W. R. King, Columbus; T. E. Monk, Cleveland; John E. McCrehen, Columbus; Charles James, Columbus; J. R. Millikin, Cincinnati; C. A. Stillman, Akron, and George Sheridan, Columbus. The trustees will hold their first meeting in Cleveland Jan. 31 to perfect organization.

California Wins.

Los Angeles, Jan. 17.—California was all the glory of the day when MacDonald Smith of San Francisco captured the state open golf championship with a score of 285 for the 36 holes in the Los Angeles Country Club, and Eddie Loos of Los Angeles finished in second position, one stroke behind Smith.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Property Reappraisal Urged.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—General reappraisal of all property in Ohio was urged at the fourth annual conference of the Ohio Tax association here. A special session of the legislature to remove the constitutional restrictions against adjustment of the state's taxation system and to compel a more rigid assessment of real estate was advocated by John A. Zangerle, president of the association and Cuyahoga county auditor. This recommendation was received with enthusiasm by the several hundred tax experts present.

Woman Charged With Murder.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—Mrs. Emma Calovita, who was acquitted as an accessory in the Kober murder case, was charged with first degree murder in the death of Marino Costanza of this city. Costanza, a plumber, died Feb. 23, 1920, after a week's illness. Detective Cavola said he had obtained a confession from another woman that she had hired Mrs. Calovita to administer poison in the food of Costanza. The motive was to gain $2,000 insurance money, Cavola said.

Electric Lines Would Quit.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—While the state public utilities commission was hearing the application of the Cleveland, Alliance and Mahoning Valley Railway company to abandon service, two other electric roads in that vicinity filed applications with the commission to quit business. They were the Cleveland and Chagrin Falls Railway company and the Cleveland and Eastern Traction company. All three roads claim to be operating at a loss.

Tattooer Paroled.

Cleveland, Jan. 17.—James E. Wild, convicted of tattooing his initials on Marie Sanko and sentenced to an indeterminate term in the Mansfield reformatory, was paroled by Common Pleas Judge Cull. Wild had not started serving his sentence, being out on bail pending action on appeal. Judge Cull's action followed an investigation of the case and a recommendation by a physician.

State Fair Self-Sustaining.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—The Ohio state fair is no longer a burden to the taxpayer, G. R. Lewis, manager, said, in addressing the Ohio Fair Boys' association. Receipts for the 1923 state fair totaled $191,754.53, and expenditures were $197,457.24, Lewis said. These figures show that only $5,702.71 was used of the $195,000 appropriation.

Manslaughter Charged.

Cincinnati, Jan. 17.—Leo Miller, 18, of Dayton, is charged with manslaughter in a warrant sworn to by his uncle, Nathaniel Miller, this city, in connection with the fatal scalding of the latter's son, Arthur, 3, Dec. 16. Report of the death to Coroner D. C. Hendley indicated the child was scalded to death by accident.

Mines Reopening.

New Lexington, O., Jan. 17.—Mines throughout the Hocking valley are reopening, officials in this district reported. Output ending Jan. 12 was 352,178 tons, compared with 58,226 for the same week in December. There are about 1,200 fewer idle miners than on Dec. 1, it was reported.

Privilege of wearing knickerbockers on the streets has been granted the women of Reedy, W. Va., it became known when the result of a referendum showed a majority of one in favor of the women.

HARBOR LIGHTS REMOVED?

American Cruiser Tacoma on Rocks Off Vera Cruz.

NEW PROTEST TO GO FORWARD

Warship Had Steamed at Full Speed From Galveston to Register Protest Against Mexican Rebels' Obstruction of American Commerce—Mexican Army Successful on the Vera Cruz Front.

Washington, Jan. 17.—With the American cruiser Tacoma on the rocks off Vera Cruz, it was indicated that a new and more vigorous protest than originally planned will go forward to the De la Huerta rebels in Mexico.

Navy department officials expressed the belief that harbor lights must have been removed from Blanquilla reef, upon which the cruiser grounded. It was against obstruction in navigation that the officials of the ship were to have prepared the way for a protest upon their arrival.

The Tacoma was in the harbor when she went on the reef. She had steamed at full speed from Galveston with orders to establish a radio communication with Washington so that a protest could be made to De la Huerta against obstructing American commerce, which he had declared against Tampico, port for a vast foreign oil industry.

Reports to the Mexican embassy have declared that the federal army has been successful in a battle of consequence on the Vera Cruz front. Rebels under Generals Maycotte and Villarreal were decisively defeated in an engagement at Tepeaca, which is between Tehuacan and Puebla. This action has broken a large element of the rebel army, it was stated. The statement adds: "On the Jalisco front the federals continue to advance on the rebels, who still are falling back and refusing to give battle. There are numerous skirmishes, but a formal battle has not yet taken place. The retreat can not continue much further, however, before the rebels will be forced to disperse or take up a position and fight."

In the oil regions around Tuxpam federal troops are continuing the campaign to restore normal conditions in the oil fields formerly held by the rebels.

GREET WILSON

Members of Democratic National Committee Call at His Home.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, seated in a great arm chair in the library of his home here, shook the hands of a hundred men and women, members of the Democratic national committee. The scene possessed all the elements of a great human tragedy. To some of those he had known intimately in the past he gave a few words of personal greeting. To the majority he voiced only a feeble word of acknowledgement of the introduction. The committee members and the few others permitted to call were presented by Chairman Cordell Hull and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the committee, who stood at either side of the former president during the short reception.

"I am glad the convention is going to New York," Mr. Wilson told Chairman Hull. Beyond that he offered no comment on the two days' session of the committee or of the coming presidential campaign.

Prices Soaring in France.

Paris, Jan. 17.—The first effect of the drop in French exchange is seen in the announcement of new leather prices, which were boosted to the highest figure ever known here. Crocodile skin is now selling for a dollar a square inch, while fine dressed calf is not quoted, the importers being unwilling to release their stock. According to present prognostications, all items of feminine apparel here will be from 40 to 50 per cent higher than last year.

Rail Accidents in England.

London, Jan. 17.—There was only one railway accident in England involving loss of life during 1923. This was at Duggle in July, when two passengers were killed. Since the beginning of the present century there have been two years, 1901 and 1903, without a single fatality to passengers. In only three years have more than five persons been killed and in referendum showed a majority of one in favor of the women.

FALL ASSAILED

Senator Caraway Alleges Betrayal of High Trust.

Washington, Jan. 17.—A sensational attack upon former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall for his part in the Teapot Dome oil lands lease was made in the senate by Senator Caraway of Arkansas.

Senator Caraway accused Mr. Fall of "wilful and deliberate falsehood" in his statements to the senate investigating committee. He made pointed references to the $100,000 which Mr. Fall received about the time the Teapot Dome lease was granted, and dealt also with the statements of Edward B. McLean, Washington newspaper publisher, in connection with the $100,000 loan. The senator continued: "A cabinet officer betrays the high trust imposed in him and for a corrupt consideration sold the very means by which our national existence is to be protected, and he himself is protected. And except for what I may say about it we will never hear any more of the resolution of mine seeking to cancel the leases of the Teapot Dome and the other oil reserves."

At another point in his address, Senator Caraway drew a bitter parallel between the sale to the British army of "the little rocky fortress on the Hudson" by Benedict Arnold and what he characterized as the sale of the naval oil reserves.

To Hold Minimum Wage Hearings.

Columbus, Jan. 17.—Senator Frank Burch of Akron and Representative Sam Lipp of Cincinnati, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the legislative committee for the investigation of minimum wage laws, conferred here on plans of the committee. Letters and questionnaires have been sent out to organizations on both sides of the question; literature is being collected, and public hearings probably will be held in Columbus within the next few months.

LINKS THREE CITIES

Counterfeiting Plot Revealed by the Secret Service.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—A counterfeiting conspiracy linking Kansas City, Chicago and Denver was revealed by secret service operatives here. Ralph Oldham, former Chicago policeman, and Louis Kettler, alleged implicants, have been sent to Denver for trial, federal authorities stated. Two others, Robert White, alias Edwards, and Fred Barringer, were sentenced at Kansas City to serve terms in a federal penitentiary. Edward C. Bronson, alleged ring leader, is under arrest here and, according to officials, admitted circulating $20,000 in spurious $10 bills throughout the southwest.

Shaken by Quake.

Tokio, Japan, Jan. 17.—Senrai, an important market city on the Bay of Sendai, was shaken by another violent earthquake. It is not known whether the shock had serious results. Official announcement was made placing the casualties of Tuesday's tremor in Tokio and Yokohama at 17 dead. Most estimates of the injured were around 200.

OVERWEIGHT AT CERTAIN AGE INVOLVES DANGER

U. S. Health Service Advises 10 to 20 Pounds Below Average

Washington.—Mortality experience indicates that overweight at certain ages involves serious danger, the degree of danger increasing with the excess in weight over the average for height and age. At younger ages, however, a limited amount of overweight appears to be of advantage or associated with more favorable mortality conditions, overweight persons of such ages having a uniformly lower death rate from tuberculosis.

These are among the conclusions drawn from a study of mortality statistics by the United States public health service. The records of insurance companies indicate that after 35 years of age overweight even in relatively small amounts begins to be dangerous, the seriousness increasing with advancing age and amount of overweight. Other conclusions based on these records are:

Among short men—that is, those below 5 feet 7 inches—at the age period forty to forty-four years, an excess of 20 per cent in weight involves an added mortality of 30 per cent above the normal. A 40 per cent excess in weight in such individuals involves an increased mortality of nearly 80 per cent. Among tall men—that is, those over 5 feet 10 inches—the adverse situation is even more marked; for among them, at ages forty to forty-four, a 20 per cent excess in weight carries a 40 per cent increase in mortality, and a 40 per cent excess in weight doubles the mortality.

On the other hand, underweight in general is an advantage, if the percentage is not too great. It is a serious impairment in early adult life, but from the age of forty onward there apparently are no such penalties, and this condition, in fact, becomes a distinct advantage, for these are the persons who have the best mortality rates.

"It would seem that the records of insurance companies indicate that there is an optimum weight—that is, a weight-height ratio in relation to age that is associated with the most favorable mortality experience, and that this optimum weight, or best build, is not the average build," says the service. "It is stated that those who weigh between 10 and 20 per cent

below the average show the optimum condition for longevity at most ages beyond early adult life.

"Discrimination must be made between types of build of overweight persons, it being shown that among overweights having a large chest capacity the conditions of mortality are more favorable than among those of small chest capacity. Overweights who have large trunks are better risks than those having small chests and large abdominal girth."

Many Pieces of Sculpture Unearthed —Traces of Palace.

Excavations in Rome's ancient Main street, Corso Umberto, have brought to light many pieces of ancient Greek and Roman sculpture. Four triumphal arches stood in the Corso in ancient times and many fragments unearthed in the course of the improvements that are being made are believed to be parts of these arches.

In the Via Plebisito are traces of a great imperial palace and the walls of an ancient temple. At the Piazza Sciarra, a Corinthian column was found and a fragment from the temple of Neptune. In the Via Caravita two ancient columns were unearthed and also fragments of a medieval church.

SMALL TOWN HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

He who loves his neighbor, in the sense meant, honors and loves his God as well.

There may be a limit to the bunco game, but it does not yet seem to have been reached.

The government is telling of the new design for its $10,000 bills. What was the old design?

Some men swear because it is the only means they have of attracting attention to themselves.

Young men should be careful of what they read. The golden rule of success is never found between the pages of a dime novel.

Stout Women Like
Long-Lined Gowns

Plaited Sections Have Tendency to Reduce Midlady's Size.

For the woman of larger proportions the dress with plaited sections holds a strong appeal, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Everything has been done with this design to give it long lines and a salutary effect upon the figure that is inclined to stoutness. There are the plaited sections interspersed with those that are plain and, since the material is all the same quality and coloring, it offers no distinct lines of divergence to work havoc with figure lines that in themselves are not entirely straight. The frock was made of a heavy weave of silk crepe in dark brown, or rather one of those shades of brown that lie between the dark and the light and are most expressive of the color tendencies of the present season.

The little cape is indicative of the present mode. Women are finding out how useful a garment of this sort can be. They are rejoicing in its possibilities of offering a slight covering for the frock along with its tendency to give to the costume a more formal sort of appearance. This little, short cape has plaited sections over the sides; and the back section, along with portions on either side of the front, is left plain. Then there is a collar made of printed silk showing tones of brown, green and yellow. It is attached in the most informal manner with tied ends on front that give it a becoming appearance and provide a finish that is consistent with the character of the frock. Then, to repeat the printed silk, cuffs have been added to the plaited frock, and they take on the same appearance as the collar by being provided with the ends that knot about the wrists and leave loose picoté ends flying. Then, around the wide crown on the little hat a scarf of the same silk is tied as an interesting way to solve the consistency of the entire costume.

The dress has been plaited in sections, the idea being that a whole plaited frock becomes too hard a thing to manage, but that when it is done in this manner it solves every practical difficulty and produces a frock of fashion just the same.

This sort of dress can be done in all colors of crepe from white, which is one of the enthusiasms of the season, to the duldest black, and in every case it can be so helped by the small application of brilliantly printed silk that it is at once lifted out of the somber and uninteresting class.

Trimmings of Posies for New White Hats

New white hats show trimmings of flowers. For the all-white hat that is meeting with such great favor, gardenias are much used.

One sees much of the violet shades among the new offerings in all departments of dress, especially in the millinery shops where even sport hats in the purple hues are prominent. It is a tone that harmonizes nicely with most of the other fashionable colors and its popularity is assured.

Cement Floors.
Cement floors are found much more frequently than formerly. These appear in different colors and tones, and are either plain and smooth or laid off in tile effect. In kitchens the edges are usually curved up so as to abolish cracks and sharp angles in which dust and dirt may accumulate. They are also used in bathrooms, sun parlors, breakfast rooms and even, now and then, in quite formal rooms. They are sanitary, but cold to the feet.

The Modern Shovel.
What has become of the old-fashioned minister who used to preach against laying up money to rust and corrode while in this mundane sphere? The few shovels we get hear no rust and they do not corrode, neither doth moths prey upon them, but we sometimes feel like it goes the other way, although they have not broken in upon us.—Hartford Republican.

Beat the Burglar to It.
Much sympathy is felt for the burglars who broke into a house at Herne Hill last week. Unfortunately for them the grocer's bill had been paid the previous day.—Punch, London.

AMUSEMENTS
A brilliant cast including Renee Adoree, Barbara La Marr, Earle Williams, Pat O'Malley, Wallace Berry, Josef Swickard and Pat Harmon, figures brilliantly thru Metro's "The Eternal Struggle," the feature attraction at the Met theater.
"The Eternal Struggle" is literally packed with spectacular thrills, most of which were filmed in far Canada where the story is centered. Aside from the tense drama of "The Eternal Struggle," the production has the marvelous beauty of the frozen north as a natural setting and it is beautifully photographed.
"The Eternal Struggle" is a notable achievement and ranks easily among the great pictures of the screen. It was adapted by J. G. Hawks and Monte M. Katterjohn from the famous novel by G. B. Lancaster, "The Law-Bringers," and was photographed by Percy Hilburn. It is a Reginald Barker production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS.
In making out his income tax return for the year, 1923, the business man, professional man and farmer will be required to use Form 1040, regardless of whether his net income was or was not in excess of $5000. The smaller form, 1040A, is used for reporting net income of $5,000 or less derived chiefly from salary or wages.
All items of gross income must be reported. In the case of a storekeeper gross income usually consists of the gross profits on sales, together with income from other sources. The return must show the gross sales, purchases and cost of goods sold.
The professional man, lawyer, doctor, dentist, must include all fees and other compensation for professional services. The farmer must report as gross income the proceeds of sale or exchange of products from the sale of products purchased by him and resold. He must also report gross income from all other sources.
Taxpayers, in order to take full advantage of the deductions to which they are entitled, are advised to study carefully the instructions on the forms under the head, "Income from business or profession."

MASTER'S JEWEL
Presented by Heber Lodge Officers to Past Master C. E. Hill.
Heber lodge of Masons of Williamsport, Ohio, met in regular communication Tuesday evening, January 15, under their new corps of officers, Carl Hurst, worshipful master, presiding.
Wellington D. Pontious of Dayton, who was made a Master Mason in Heber lodge in 1895 and still a member paid his home lodge a visit for the first time since 1900 at which time he removed to Dayton and has since made that city his home.
Another event of the evening was the presenting a Past Master's badge or emblem to retiring Master C. E. Hill by Charles H. Carman, who made the presentation in a few and appropriate words as the gift came from the excellent corps of officers who had assisted Mr. Hill as worshipful master during the past two years.
Mr. Hill was very much surprised and in his acceptance tendered his most sincere thanks to the donors of the gift, stating that he was willing and ready at any time to assist in the welfare and prosperity of the lodge and that he also very highly prized the gift and especially the high esteem love and respect that accompanied the same.

"What's ziz first name?" asked the House Detective.
"They didn't have any when he lived," explained the girl.
"All the people of his time lived in cue little spot in the world and each one had his own name, like the pups in a kennel club book. He was just Socrates."
"That was before the days when every street was always dug up by the electric light company putting a conduit on one side and the gas company taking up a pipe on the other. This old guy put in all his time, running around the streets at night with a lantern, hunting an honest man. I bet lots and lots of times some holdup man stuck a gun in his face and took the lantern away from him."
"He used to talk about his wife in a perfectly human way, but this bug to find an honest man drove him to the seclusion of the bathtub where he sat and meditated till he was all wrinkled up, like a washwoman's hands. At last they made him drink a cup of hemlock and put him out of misery."
"For hundreds of years people have been holding a lodge of sorrow over this guy, because he had to drink poison, yet the streets and alleys and hotel corridors are full of simps hunting a bootlegger and when they get it and drink it and knock on the pearly gates and say, 'Peter,' here is another fool," they don't get one bit of sympathy.
"It's a queer world, Kelly."

Indictment Upheld.
New York, Jan. 17.—Indictment against Thomas Seltzer, New York publisher, charging him with possession of an indecent book, was upheld by Supreme Court Justice Wagner when he overruled a demurrer filed by counsel for Seltzer. The court held that question as to character of the book "Casanova's Homecoming," was for the jury to decide. Seltzer denied that the book was indecent within the meaning of the New York statute.

Five Charged With Robbery.
Chicago, Jan. 17.—Five men were arrested here in connection with the $1,500,000 Union station mail robbery here three years ago. Those arrested were: Isadore Goldberg and Louis Kretzner, brothers-in-law and jewelry brokers; George Rizzio, C. A. Jerdee and M. J. Roell. All are from Chicago. Other arrests will follow, postal inspectors intimated.

Rickard to Stage Bouts.
New York, Jan. 17.—Tex Rickard is talking about putting on a Dempsey-Gibbons fight at the Polo grounds in New York for the entertainment of the delegates to the Democratic national convention here in June. Rickard said he expects to stage a fight between Harry Wills and Luis Firpo, probably on Decoration day.

Varied Climes, Varied Habits.
Natives of hot climates who spend much time in the water rarely use soap except for a shave or shampoo. The Esquimaux is a reckless bather during the fishing season, when he is forced to wade to disentangle his nets, but his wife and family think handling wet nets absolves them from further bathing rites.

Sandalwood Fragrance.
Sandalwood is a fragrant wood yielded by several species of trees growing in the East Indies and other tropical countries. Because of the fragrance of the wood insects will keep away from clothing stored in sandalwood chests. Once the wood has lost its fragrance, there is no known way of restoring it.

THE OLD CAPTAIN

I set all day an' watch the sea—
It wuz my friend fer long, but now
It's flung me off, as friends 'll do.
"You be too old," says it t' me,
"I must hev men whose blood is noo."

I set here in the same high sun
Thet beats upon the quarterdeck
Of vessels I hev sent like men
Int' the jaws o' hurricanes, an' won—
Showed the young sea a jolly trick
again!

The sailors goin' up th' street
Call out t' me t' take a trip along
O' them—but could I stan' b'side th'
rail
An' hear another feller's voice 's
sweet
'S vinegar a-bawlin' orders on the
gale?

I shan't take dyin' well—I feel it
In my bones—an' yet I'd give the rest
Of these here years t' stan' fer once
upon a bridge
An' tell 'em what t' do; t' feel her
Hoppin' faster in the wind that's got 'n
edge!

Yet here I set all day b'fore this ship
O' "curios," they call 'em, people do,
Though they ain't nothin' curious t' me.
The folks that pass us by they call
me "Pop!"
I'm like them other relics, I s'pose,
picked up off the sea.

Times.

Priests Not Always Celibates.

From the very beginning of the Catholic church it was the custom for those entering the priesthood to renounce marriage. It was not obligatory, and the rule requiring men, who were already married at the time of ordination, to separate from their wives, was not made until the end of the fourth century, when Pope Siricus forbade the clergy to marry, and ordered the separation from their wives of priests already married. This accounts for the fact that St. Peter, the first head of the Catholic church, was a married man.

ARTIST SCOLDS HIS PATRON

Well-Known American Painter Refused to Alter Portrait and Ordered Customer From Studio.

Augustus Johns, the foremost and most original painter in England, came a few weeks ago to the United States to serve on a jury for the Pittsburgh exhibit. In New York his first visit was to the studio of Joseph Stella. He expressed his admiration in no uncertain terms.

A few days later Johns was ban-queted by some of the foremost captains of finance in America. The painter was asked his opinion about art
in general and, artists in particular.
Whom did he consider the most significant artist in America? He answered that he considered the most original, powerful and exquisite artist in America to be Joseph Stella.

A week later, one by one, most of these financial giants visited the studio
of Stella, escorted by their wives.
Stella drew their portraits in gold-point.
One of them, quite satisfied with the sketch of his wife, made out a check to the artist in four figures. Then Stella asked: "May I ask you what your business is?" The magnate smiled at the innocence of the artist, who evidently was not familiar with big financial personalities, but he answered: "My business is everybody's business," and laughed at his own cryptic joke.

Johns chided Stella for his attitude towards his patrons, but it appears they liked it. "The one whose business you inquired," said Johns, "sells oil in every state of the Union, and also all over the world; the other coal;
the third is one of the most prominent bankers in America, and so on."

Stella is not keen about great names; only artistic personalities. A wealthy man once ordered him to change his portrait; or, better said, to correct it. Stella replied: "I don't tell you how to run your business.
How dare you presume to advise me about mine?" He refused to make the correction and forbade the man his studio.

Which reminds me of the anecdote
of Julius II, who visited Michelangelo while the latter was busy with his frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and ordered the painter to make some changes. Michelangelo lost his temper and said to the pope: "Do I ever tell you how to write your papal bulls?"
and forthwith ordered him out of the Sistine Chapel, besides threatening to stop working if he ever entered the chapel again until he had finished the frescoes. Julius II, wise man that he was, realized that he had overstepped his authority and obeyed the injunction of the artist. After all he was only a pope, and Michelangelo was—

Tennysonian French.

A good Tennysonian yarn turns on the poet's ignorance of French and his brother Frederick's uneasy command of it. The brothers Tennyson were enjoying together a holiday in Paris.
Coming down before Alfred one morning, Frederick, who simply wished the fire to be kept, said to a waiter,
"Prenez garde de ne pas laisser sortir
le feu" ("Take care not to let the fire go out"), but with his English accent
the waiter became fou (fool), so that when the great Alfred sauntered downstairs
later the waiters did their best to follow the quaintly worded order. The eccentric appearance and manners of the poet had predisposed the establishment to regard him as a lunatic and here was crowning proof in the order of his keeper. Alfred stormed and raged, but was restrained by force till his brother's return.—From the Argonaut.

Robin Hood a Disgraced Earl.

Robin Hood was a noted English freebooter and outlaw who, according to tradition, dwelt with his followers
in Sherwood forest, Nottinghamshire,
during the reign of Richard I (1189-1199), and later. Many of the old ballads and stories commemorate his deeds of valor, his generosity, his gallantry, and his skill in archery. His principal companions were Little John,
Friar Tuck, Will Scarlet and Maid Marian; while his chief enemies were the abbot of St. Mary's and the sheriff of Nottingham. According to some historians, Robin Hood was a name assumed by the earl of Huntingdon, who was disgraced and banished from court by Richard I at the time of his accession.

Avoid Watermelon
Loss in Transit

Stem-End Rot Fungus That Brings About Decay Still Is Important Factor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Watermelon growers should give serious consideration to their responsibilities in connection with prevention of losses in transit, advises the United States Department of Agriculture. Examination of carloads at destination has shown that, provided shipments are properly loaded in clean,
well-ventilated cars, and delivered
within a reasonable length of time,
any losses experienced usually result from the shipping of:

- (1) Melons affected with bad
anthracnose pock marks.
- (2) Severely sunscalded or stale
fruit.
- (3) Melons that carry cuts and bruises as a result of careless handling, or
- (4) Melons, the stems of which have not been recipped and treated for prevention of stem-end rot.

Rot Coming Under Control.
The stem-end rot fungus, which not only causes stem-end rot, but also brings about decay following bruises and cuts in the rind, has been a source of heavy loss in the past, and is still a factor of great importance. In 1919 a campaign of education concerning methods of control for this disease was initiated in the Southeastern states, the United States Department of Agriculture and the state extension services co-operating. As a result of the interest taken in this work by farmers, distributors, and railroads,
stem-end rot is coming under control.
This conclusion is borne out by records from the food products inspection service, which indicate that in Georgia shipments losses from stem-end rot have been cut from 14.4 per cent in 1920 to 8.3 per cent in 1921,
and 6.2 per cent in 1922; and in Florida shipments from 16.6 per cent in 1920 to 10.1 per cent in 1921 and 5.3
per cent in 1922.

Timely Suggestions.

- In order that stem-end rot and losses in transit due to other causes may be reduced, farmers should make every effort to carry out the following suggestions at harvest season:
- (1) If possible avoid working
while the vines are wet.
 - (2) Never permit labor to handle rotten melons in the field and then work with fruit for shipment.
 - (3) Never permit clipper to handle
or to touch knife to rotten melons in the field.
 - (4) Never permit clipper to cut into melons while pushing knife
through the stem.
 - (5) Never permit clipper to stand melons on end to mark them in the field.
 - (6) Insist on careful handling by the tote boys and wagon men.
 - (7) Pad wagons thoroughly in order to avoid nail or splinter punctures, cuts, and bruises.
 - (8) Load on the day melons are clipped, in clean, dry car, the walls of which have been papered. Use dry straw for bedding. If possible, pad ends of car, although not in such a way as to obstruct ventilators. These should be fastened open.
 - (9) Handle carefully when unloading melons from wagons and packing. Do not allow labor to stand or sit on melons.
 - (10) Reject melons that do not have a firm, green stem, or that show sunscald or bad anthracnose marking.
 - (11) Apply stem treatment as described in Farmers' Bulletin 1277, recipping stems to firm green surface
before applying the disinfectant paste.

Clear Moss From Fruit
Trees by Proper Spray

Moss can be quite readily cleared from the trees. The solution of strong bordeaux is one of the best sprays.
The old formula of lime, sulphur and salt, where the same weight of salt is used in the spray as of lime and sulphur, namely 15 pounds to 50 gallons of the concentrated spray, is also very efficient in removing moss. But a substance which is very good to use is common lye. The lye can be used straight by dissolving in plain water,
or it can be used in the lime sulphur spray. The rate to use is about one pound can of lye for every six or seven gallons of spray. It cleans off the moss quite readily, seems to soften the bark and gives it a clean, bright appearance.

Birds Are Not Numerous
Because of Insect Pests

The chief reason birds are not more numerous and that insect pests consequently increase so rapidly is that suitable places are not provided for nesting with protection from vermin.
Cleaning out fence rows and corners
beautifies the premises but ruins the birds' homes. Building bird houses and putting them on poles will help to replace the natural homes. But better than this is to leave some small thickets at different spots over the farm.

Improper Feeding Cause
of Droopiness in Chicks

Droopy, dull chicks, with long wings
and short bodies are the result of feeding too soon, overfeeding and allowing feed on the floor or ground to become spoiled, overheating, chilling, damp floors, and from the effects of lice and mites. If chicks are droopy, correct the cause.

Finally the mother, in desperation, went to the father's store. Margaret

SOLDIER'S NERVES ON EDGE

Veterans Will Understand and Excuse Private O'Grady's Unnecessary Rousing of the Camp.

Veterans of the great war who served in the old front-line trenches in France will be able to sympathize with Private O'Grady. Some of them can remember seeing the posts that held the barbed wire out in front come together on a moonlight night and advance in a stealthy and threatening manner. They know how they felt as evening came and they prepared to "stand to." They can understand how O'Grady felt when after a day of hard fighting under a blistering Philippine sun he was assigned to do sentry duty.

The battalion camp was not more than a quarter of a mile from a curving beach, and O'Grady's post was at the water's edge. As darkness fell and the stars came out he felt weak and depressed. He glanced at the line of a fire-crested wave and watched it charge toward the shore. He glanced at a flat rock lying some dozen paces away. What! Did the rock move? It certainly did!

He looked in the opposite direction. Another flame-tipped wave was rolling toward a number of rocks lying a short distance from the water. Those rocks moved too! Very slowly they started to meet the incoming wave. He shouted "Halt!" and brought his gun to bear.

The rocks halted, and O'Grady rubbed his eyes. What had happened to him? He glanced back over his shoulder toward camp. A rock directly behind him was coming toward him. Ah! Sneaking up to bolo him in the back! O'Grady rushed madly at it and dashed the butt of his gun against its hard surface. Then he mopped his forehead. Just a common rock on the sand!

He looked up and down the shore. There they were again! Rocks everywhere were moving toward the water—edging, creeping, crawling by ones, by twos, by threes and in large groups! Then the sentinel's nerves gave way. The whole battalion was awakened by his yelling like a Comanche as his rifle spat fire in the darkness.

When it was safe to approach him it took half an hour to calm him and to prove to him that his treacherous, traveling rocks were only immense but innocent turtles making their nightly visit to the water in search of food.—Youth's Companion.

Justifying Shakespeare's Will.

Little as is generally known about the life of Shakespeare, there are certain legends that everyone has heard. Now Joseph Quincy Adams in his "Life of William Shakespeare" has explained away a large portion of these legends. He didn't believe that Shakespeare was chased out of Stratford for deer poaching, or that he held horses in the rain before the doors of London theaters, or that he had any difficulties with the "dark lady," or that he had anything but the most solicitous affection for his wife when he willed her the second-best bed. The best bed, Professor Adams tells us, was usually an ornate and unused affair, reserved for guests, and Mrs. Shakespeare, being at the time, an invalid, past sixty, would have been more comfortable in the bed she was used to. Also, it is not to be assumed that the bed was all she got from the Shakespeare estate; the law explicitly providing a handsome dowry right, it would not have occurred to Shakespeare to specify the amount in money and chattels she was to receive in the will.

Ancient Customs in England.

Dr. George C. Williamson in his book, "Curious Survivals," says that old customs die hard, and in about every part of England one may find ceremonies which, linked to the days of long ago, have been handed down from generation to generation.

One of the most ancient of these survivals is the court of hustings at the Guildhall, London, which dates back to Anglo-Saxon and Scandinavian times, and which is the oldest court that still sits in England.

The dais on the occasion of the sittings of the court is sprinkled with aromatic herbs, a ceremony which recalls the time when this was done to prevent infection from prisoners suffering from jail fever.

This custom is similar to the one observed by masters and wardens of the various city companies who, in official processions, carry sweet-smelling bouquets. This was done originally to ward off the smells from the streets!

Regains Her Citizenship.

Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, author of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," is once more an American citizen. She was recently naturalized in the Superior court, having applied under the act of congress permitting American-born women who had married foreign subjects to regain citizenship. She married a British subject in Rome, twenty-five years ago.

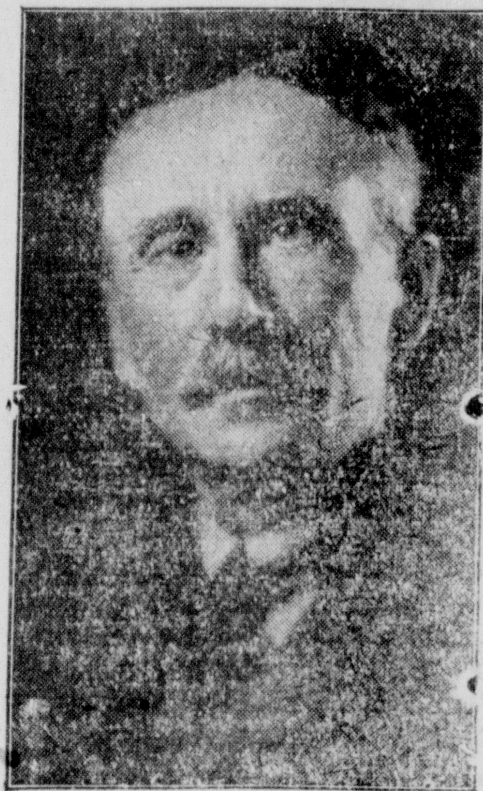

Ancient Tavern to Be Preserved.

The famous old Arrow Rock tavern, on the Missouri river, in Missouri, has been purchased by the state and turned over to the Daughters of the American Revolution. The old tavern was a place of rest and refreshment for the southwestern trader and palasman. For some time it has been a depository for articles of historic interest. One of these articles is Daniel Boone's fiddle.

RALPH CONNER'S

New Book, "The Gaspards of Pine Croft," Most Interesting.

Ralph Conner's stories, so redolent of the hills are beautiful always. The descriptions make word pictures in the mind and can not be forgotten. Lessons are taught. His new book, "The Gaspards of Pine Croft" is no exception. As in no other story, the importance of a mother's training and influence on her child, is told with fetching and convicting power. As in no other story, the fact is shown that the influence of a weak and wicked father, can be offset by a godly praying mother. As in no other story, does the main character, sacrifice, continually for what he believes to be right.

Far fetched tho the sacrifice of Paul may be, he is a beautiful character who eventually gets his reward for righteous doing. And yet, these lessons are woven into the tale so adroitly that it does not preach; at least only by atmosphere. Thrilling, so interesting that one does not wish to lay it down until he reads the last word, so is Ralph Conner's new story. He preaches daily to thousands and hundreds of thousands thru his pen. What preacher has done so much? What one can do more?

LEGION AUXILIARY.

Monday evening at the meeting of the American Legion auxiliary of the local post, officers for the ensuing year were installed and candidates initiated. A vote of thanks was given Charles Smith for his assistance in making the auxiliary sale held at his place of business a success. C. C. Chappellear was also given a vote of thanks for publicity given the sale thru the medium of the Union-Herald. After the business session an old-fashioned oyster supper was served.

The hope of the local post is to enlist every woman eligible to membership.

Two of the jurors selected to serve on the federal jury now trying William G. Benham, former president and Dwight L. Harrison, former vice president of the defunct R. L. Dollings company on charges of using the mails to defraud are from this county. They are Marvin Dresbach of Pickaway township and Eber A. Riggan, of New Holland. Felix Swope of Lancaster, another juror, is well known in this city.

Grease Spots.

When grease is spilled on a hardwood floor it can be hardened and scraped off if cold water is poured on. If it is not detected immediately, cover the grease spot with starch or powdered chalk, which will absorb most of the grease. It can then be washed off with hot soapsuds.
